

Your Excellency, dear Ambassador, dear Madam, dear Sir,

Yours is a beautiful country and you are a great people and I respect your pride.

But pride has something to do with honour as well. And most people of your nation have that, too.

But it has nothing to do with honour, to torture other living beings to their death in front of many spectators. You certainly agree with that.

But that is what happens in bullfights. That bloody spectacle simply does not belong in our times any more. Show your honour and grant to these proud and beautiful living beings, the bulls, their own lives. Because animals, too, have feelings, they experience pain, and loss and love.

But, coming back to facts, it is not the task of European taxpayers to co-finance such a spectacle. But nothing else happens, when the European Union distributes agricultural subsidies all over Europe. Of course farmers in Spain shall have their share, but not a single breeder who raises these pitiable beings, the bulls, only to suffer a terrible death in an arena.

Please convey this message to your otherwise great country and to its proud inhabitants and please remember: La tortura no es cultural!

Sincerely
